WTSU prof. wins award as teacher

An assistant professor of history at West Texas State University will be honored Tuesday night at the Annual Phoenix Club Banquet.

Frank Heflin, who has been on the WTSU faculty since 1957, will be the ninth recipient of the $1,000 Faculty Excellence Award.

Heflin earned his Bachelor of Arts Degree at Franklin College and his Master of Arts degree at Vanderbilt University, where he has completed all of the requirements for his Ph.D. with the exception of the dissertation.

Heflin and his wife Pat are members of the St. Stephen United Methodist Church in Amarillo where he is on the administrative board and teaches a Sunday School class. The Heflins live at 5318 Randolph in Amarillo.

The Alumni Association board of directors, which each year selects the recipient of the Phoenix Club Faculty Excellence Award, received many letters from Heflin's colleagues, former students and present students, and citizens across the country in support of his nomination for the award.

The letters cited Heflin's teaching abilities, his concern for students, his support of West Texas State University and his participation in civic activities.

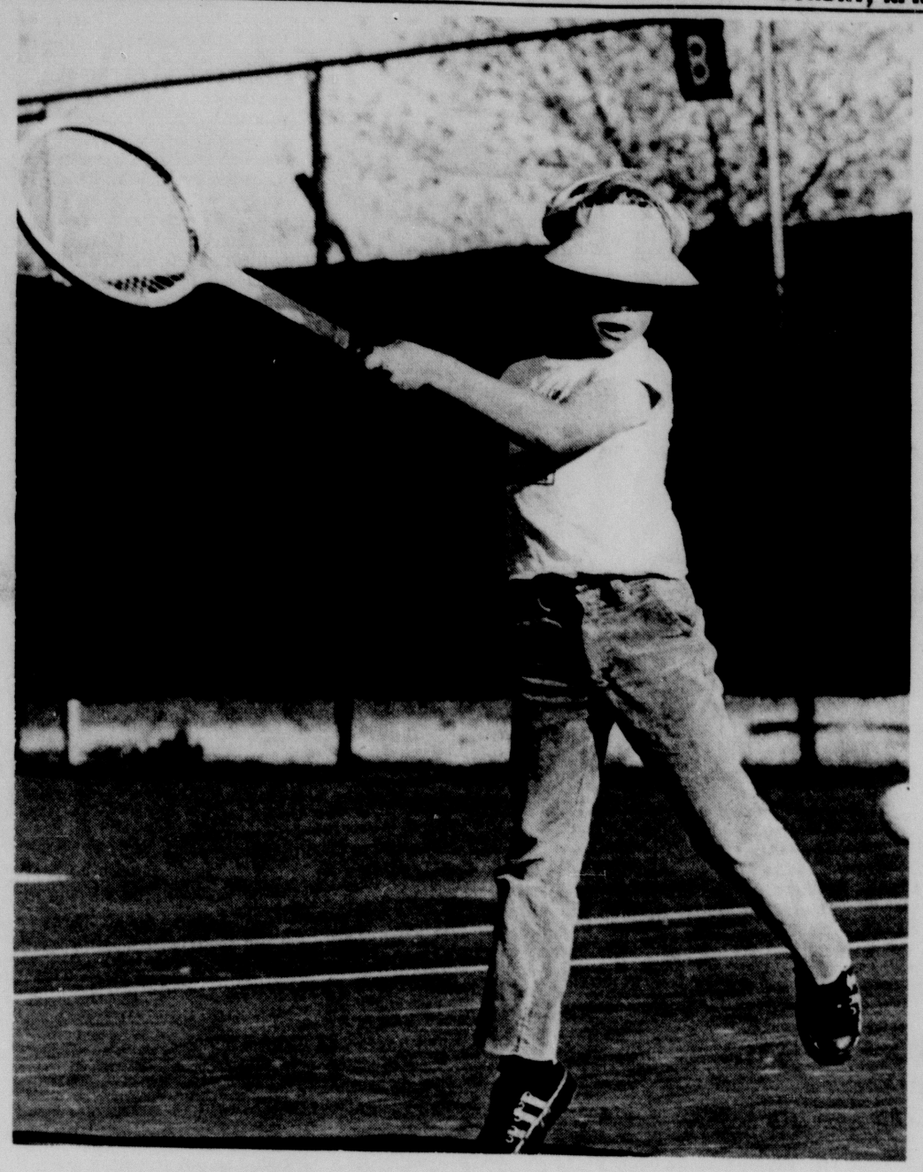
Heflin has been chapter adviser of Texas Theta, Phi Delta Theta social fraternity, since the chapter was installed at WTSU in 1964. He was named as the "Outstanding Chapter Adviser" nationally for the period of 1972-74.

Phi Delta Theta at West Texas State, with Heflin as its adviser, is currently the largest of six fraternities on campus and is one of the five largest chapters in the general fraternity. It has been first in scholarship among fraternities at WTSU for 17 of 22 semesters.

Past recipients of the Faculty Excellence Award are: from the School of Agriculture, Dr. Charles Smallwood, dean, and Dr. Jimmie Green; from the College of Education, Dr. Claud Zevely and Dr. Emmitt Smith; and from the College of Arts and Sciences, Dr. Bill Cooper (Biology), Dr. Frank Daugherty (Geology), Dr. Ples Harper (Modern Languages), and Dr. Hollis Cook (Mathematics).

The 1975 Student Man of the Year will also be recognized at the banquet, as will the immediate past president of West Texas State University Alumni Association, which is the parent organization of the Phoenix Club. The winner of the Student Man of the Year Award will not be known until the presentation is made. Mrs. Thelma Evans is the immediate past president of the Alumni Association and will be recongized for her service by current president Joe Y. Snead of Amarillo.

The Phoenix Club Banquet is an annual event on campus, with Phoenix Club members and their spouses attending as guests.



David Thomason, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Thomason of 501 Holman Lane, takes a swing and watches the ball go by unscathed as he plays tennis with his dad Friday afternoon here. Despite unpredictable weather, tennis players have flocked to the only tennis courts in town — those at West Texas State University — to begin their summer exercise.

Legislative pay on ballot Tuesday for city voters

Randall County voters will go to the polls Tuesday to decide whether Texas legislators should have a pay raise and whether revisions should be made in state and municipal employee retirement systems.

Just under 30,000 persons are registered to vote in the constitutional amendment election, according to County Clerk LeRoy Hutton.

On the ballot Tuesday will be just two propositions, both of which, if they pass, would become parts of the state constitution.

The first proposition on the ballot concerns revising and consolidating the provisions in the document relating to state and local retirement systems and programs and providing for a maximum state contribution to state systems of 10 per cent of the aggregate compensation paid to individuals.

Passage of the amendment would allow the state to increase its contribution to the Teacher Retirement System of Texas, the Texas Municipal Retirement System, the Texas County & District Retirement System, and the Employees Retirement System of Texas.

Currently, the state contributes 6 per cent of the total salaries paid to members of those local and state systems. The amendment would raise the total to 10 per cent. Employee contributions would not be increased.

The second proposition on the ballot sets the salaries for members of the legislature at $600 per month and a per diem of $30 per day during legislative sessions and a mileage allowance of 16 cents per mile.

Currently, legislators make $400 per month and their per diem during sessions is $12. Auto mileage for legislators is currently 10 cents per mile.

The Canyon Classroom Teacher's Association and the local chapter of the Texas State Teachers Association have endorsed both proposals.

The polls will open 7 a.m. and will close at 7 p.m. at the several Randall County voting places on Tuesday. Ballots will be counted by computer at the West Texas State University computer center.

A light voter turn-out is anticipated for the election, if past special elections are indications of voter interest.

In a constitutional amendment election in 1969, for example, only 18.2 per cent of the registered voters went to the polls. The percentage fell below 11 per cent during the special election in 1971 and was only 11.4 per cent in 1973.

Hutton predicts not more than 30 per cent of the registered voters will turn out for the Tuesday balloting.

Only 13,000 persons voted here in the 1974 general election.

Polling places in the county are:

Precincts 1, 2 and 3 — Ralph Switch Elevator
Precinct 4 — Umbarger School
Precinct 5, 6, 7 and 23 — Canyon community center
Precinct 8 — Lamb Fertilizer Plant

AID official sees problems

Starvation is a political problem

The starvation of millions of the Earth's people is basically a political problem, inherent in individual governments which are unresponsive to the needs of their own citizens, the director of rural development for the Agency for International Development told students and faculty here Friday.

Dr. Edgar Owens, who heads up the agency program for the U.S. Department of State, said governments must exert their own energies in solving their food shortage and population problems if starvation is to be stemmed.

Owens, keynote speaker Saturday at a Food-Population Symposium on the West Texas State University campus, held an informal discussion Friday afternoon with students and faculty.

It is up to governments, he said, to open their economic systems, their credit systems, to small farmers, who in most underdeveloped nations provide food production.

"The little farmer is the answer," he said. "And, these little guys have been left out and for them there's a poverty problem because they don't belong to the system."

Owens, who has served AID in Pakistan, Bangladesh, Vietnam and Thailand, said the United States cannot will an end to starvation in other countries of the world.

"It's high time in our aid programs that we face the issue of political will and if governments are not willing (to solve their problems) then maybe we shouldn't provide aid or as much aid as in the past," he said.

More and more, he said, talk in Washington emphasizes the need for underdeveloped nations to show they have the will to change their economic or social systems to allow the small farmer to be productive.

Economic growth, which would help countries in their fights to eliminate starvation and overpopulation, is dependent on several things, Owens said. Success in economic development depends to a great extent on getting the "little people" involved in solutions, and on public accountability.

A high level of integrity in public officials is necessary before economic development can be successful, he said.

And, he said, there is a correlation between the ability of a government to give access to political and economic systems to the small farmer or the rural residents and the ability of a government to insure integrity in those systems and the birth rate of the people of the country.

In the long run, he said, economic development is more important in stemming the tide of starvation than is birth control, because it is through true economic development that the mechanism for birth control is found.

Owens said it is simply not realistic to urge birth control on hungry people by dispensing birth control pills or other contraceptives.

"The real issue is what kind of family planning program is successful" he said. "Most of you come from small families. Why?"

In Western countries, Owens said, most people make a choice on family size and base their decision on how many children they can raise economically and educate. The number of children is related to the quality of life desired by the parents.

In subsistence-level nations, those now facing the possibilities of starvation, there is still a strong feeling that a large family assures more hands to help with the farming.

Likewise, the infant mortality rate in those subsistence-level countries is so high that most families feel they must have two

WTSU officials to study married student housing

An architect will join West Texas State University officials this week in a tour of the old Stafford Hall dormitory facility on campus to assess its potential for married student housing.

Weldon Trice, dean of men at WTSU, made the announcement of the tour Thursday night at a meeting called on campus to air complaints of married students concerning prices and availability of housing in Canyon.

Trice said he plans to call a meeting possibly later this month of Canyon landlords and apartment house owners to discuss the problems aired Thursday night.

The dean of men said he is not optimistic about the possibility of turning Stafford Hall, which has for years been a men's dormitory, into a married student housing unit.

"The plumbing will be the big thing," he said. "By the time new plumbing and wiring is put in and we tear down the walls, the cost would kick up the price of rooms so high it would be impossible."

Even if it were possible to remodel the facility for married students, Trice said there is currently no money in the university budget for remodeling. Likewise, there is no money available for construction of a new married student facility.

Trice said a meeting between the Canyon Chamber of Commerce, which he heads as president, and landlords in the city might prove more productive in solving some of the problems students cited during the Thursday night session.

A key problem, he said, seems to be the lack of a central office which would refer students to available housing.

Trice suggested it might be possible to get landlord cooperation in providing up-to-date listings of available housing to the Chamber office where students could go with some assurance the information would be current.

While students attending the Thursday night session complained of what they termed high prices for apartments and houses in Canyon, Trice said his information would indicate prices here are much lower than are prices for comparable facilities in Amarillo.

Students attending the session noted that married students had the local economy because they usually stay in Canyon a full 12 months during their tenure at WTSU.

Trice said he will talk with Chamber of Commerce directors this week.

DA to recommend board appointment

Dist. Atty. Randall Sherrod will tell county school trustees this week they must appoint someone to their board representing precinct 4, that South Amarillo area in which residents were not allowed to vote for trustee.

Trustees are to meet at 10 a.m. Thursday in the office of County Judge Woody Pond. Pond is also ex-officio school superintendent.

Sherrod said Thursday it is his opinion that the term of office for Amarillo Accountant Don Marsh, ended April 5 and that either Marsh or another candidate must be appointed to the precinct 4 seat.

Gordon Hendricks, an Amarillo insurance agent, has also indicated he is interested in being appointed to the county board, which has for two years been involved in the controversial issue of school property annexation.

County trustees met April 10 to swear in newly-elected officials to the board, but decided to delay action on swearing-in a representative to precinct 4 until a recommendation could be sought from Sherrod. A motion for the board to appoint Hendricks to the

Professor proposes national energy goal

The United States must develop a national energy goal which would call for an orderly transition from the use of fossil fuels to fuels of almost infinite availability, but the goal will be difficult to reach because of the nature of politics, a Texas Tech University chemical engineering professor said here Friday.

Dr. Harry Parker, who is involved in feedlot waste conversion research at the Lubbock college, said it is obvious that implementation of such a national energy goal, must have contraints.

He urged a "more rational energy policy than we see today" from the federal government. The lack of a stated national energy policy, he said is one of the biggest obstacles in the way of moving toward solutions to the nation's energy problems.

Within 400 or 500 years, Parker said, Americans will have consumed all the fossil fuels it is possible to extract from the ground. Americans double their energy needs every 23 years and cannot continue to double the demand at that rate indefinitely, he said.

Yet, several factors in American life work to make it almost necessary that energy demand increase at that rate. To get more energy, energy must be invested, pollution measures cost energy, an improved standard of living costs energy, and social welfare programs cost energy, he said.

"So we're in a dilemma," Parker said. "We cannot continue to double our demand every 23 years but we have demands for energy."

Parker suggested a national energy goal — to make the transition from fossil fuels to energy sources of infinite availability with constraints.

One constraint would be a minimum decrease in the standard of living. Another would be a minimum security risk both militarily and economically, and yet another would be acceptable changes in the environment.

Parker said full development of fossil fuels during the transition period would place emphasis on the use of coal because it is the most plentiful fossil fuel resource. In decreasing order of availability, he said are oil, gas, oil shale and tar sands.

The most likely long-term energy sources for future use, those of almost infiniate availablity, according to Parker, will be deep geothermal energy, solar energy, wind energy, breeder nuclear reactors and fusion nuclear reactors.

Mechanically and economically, Parker said, geothermal has yet to be shown as a practical long-term alternative.

Solar energy, while abundant, likewise has some mechanical and engineering problems. He suggested that the cost for solar energy for use in supplying energy needs for entire cities would be about $22 per million BTU's while the current cost of gas is about $1.50 per million BTU's.

Wind energy is a more likely source, he said, particularly in terms of cost. He said the cost for providing wind-generated energy could be as low as $2 per million BTU's.

Nevertheless, the wind energy is expensive, he said, when compared to fusion reactors and breeder reactors.

While one breeder reactor has been completed in France and appears to be working well, there is not yet one in operation in the United States, he said. Likewise, engineering and mechanical dif-

Another proposal in for cable TV

Two West Texas State University vice presidents have told city officials they, too, will seek a franchise to operate a cable television service for Canyon residents.

A letter to Mayor Manly Bryan from Dr. T. Paige Carruth, vice president for student affairs, and Hermas Miller, vice president for financial affairs, indicates they will seek a franchise for the service.

Miller said Friday he, Carruth and an experienced cable television operator from Mineral Wells are now investigating the possibilities of forming a cable television company for the city.

He said the group will file for a franchise "if we see we can put one in.

"It's kind of tentative," he said.

Miller said he's not sure when the group will seek a franchise from Canyon city commissioners, but he indicated it will be as soon as possible.

"We're serious about it," he said. "We want to be sure we can do it and do it right before we apply for a franchise."

T.D. Austin of Austin & Associates of Amarillo has already filed for a franchise from the city to operate a cable television service here. He will make a formal proposal before commissioners Mon-

Rising insurance costs to be eyed

Ever-increasing costs for liability and malpractice insurance for staff members at Canyon's Palo Duro Hospital will be a key item of discussion Monday night for hospital board members.

Administrator Ray Grimes met with insurance representatives Friday to determine the cost of the new hospital for insurance just involving professional liability or malpractice.

In the past the hospital has been paying about $4000 per year for liability insurance which covers any act of negligence for the hospital staff.

He said figures are not yet available on how much the cost will be for the new facility, but he speculated that the hospital will be paying "considerably more."

In the past five years, he said, the cost for that type insurance to the hospital has doubled.

And, indications are that the cost will continue to rise at a rapid rate over the next few years.

"I think it will go up very, very fast," he said. "The only thing that will prevent it from getting outrageously high like it is elsewhere is legislation on the limits of liability."

Grimes said there are currently two or three pieces of legislation proposed in the Texas Legislature which would limit liability and there are also national legislation proposals.

The administrator said historically rates for liability hospital coverage in Canyon have

Dr. Charles Townsend, Canyon authority on the life and music of Bob Wills, finally received his Grammy Award in the mail recently and will have the small statue on display during a reception honoring the West Texas State University historian from 2 to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday on campus. The reception will be at the activities center ballroom. Everyone is invited. Sponsors of the event will be the university and the Canyon Chamber of Commerce.

Our World

More Money For Farmers

By ANN BROWN

Texas ranchers have been giving away or killing thousands of baby calves since the beef boycott.

Texas and New Mexico farmers are plowing up thousands of acres of wheat.

Boston fisherman gave away 13½ tons of fish last week.

An Indianapolis chicken rancher gave away 2,000 laying hens.

What will it take to alert American consumers to the plight of American producers?

The average salaried person's salary has doubled (more than doubled if he is a government employee) in the last 10 years.

In this same 10 years the average producer's income has fallen drastically, while his taxes and other expenses have more than doubled so he can pay the afore-mentioned salaries.

There is a limit, of course, to the time any producer can continue to operate below cost of production.

American producers' faith in the free enterprise system has always given them the courage to borrow money in hopes that next year will be better.

But we no longer have free enterprise; we have a controlled economy. And, apparently, none of the people in control are interested in the plight of the producers.

Forty years ago, one could buy 160 acres of land, with a good house on it, in the most productive county in Texas, for $4,000.

The federal government did not start collecting inheritance taxes until the estate passed $60,000 in "fair market value."

That 160 acres would sell (or be currently valued) at $100,000 and we still have the same $60,000 limitation.

Now the house on that same farm may be valued (for tax purposes) at $60,000. So any farmer fortunate enough to own his farm when he dies knows the government is going to take it away from his survivors as soon as he is gone.

The vast majority of farm and ranch families who owned land in 1940 no longer have it. Even the thrifty ones who managed to pay the mortgage can't save it from the clutches of the Internal Revenue.

Land is constant, so what becomes of farms taken from the farmers?

The present-day buyer is usually a doctor, lawyer, retired military man, or other professional who needs to lose money on the land so he can use it as a tax deduction.

Nelson Rockefeller reportedly bought 6,000 acres of Texas for a vacation spot for his family.

The Boston fisherman reportedly gave away his fish because he was offered 10 cents a pound for them.

Fish cost so much in the market, says the merchant, because the processors have to make a living. True. But doesn't the man who catches the fish deserve a living?

The chicken rancher said he was offered 14 cents a dozen for eggs.

Farmers get $3.25 for a bushel of wheat while consumers pay 50 cents for one loaf of bread.

"The laborer is worthy of his hire." It's only fair that the wholesaler, retailer, and processors are paid for the work they do.

But why should the man who produces the goods that provide a living for all the others not get paid for his work, too?

And the producer is the only one in the whole process who works unlimited hours in all kinds of weather, often 7 days a week.

Ask the man who works from before daylight until after dark in snow, rain, and blistering heat to feed and care for his cattle if he thinks the price of beef is too high.

Ask the women who wait weeks on end while their men risk their lives on the high seas if the price of fish is too high.

Ask the people who milk cows, feed chickens, and gather eggs 7 days a week, 365 days a year if the price of milk, butter, and eggs is too high.

It takes lots of money and endless hard labor to produce food; it does not originate in supermarkets.

We will either pay for our food in America, or we will eventually go hungry as they do in more than half the world.

Tennis Pro Shop Opens

A full-line tennis pro shop featuring Garcia equipment and Adidas apparel has opened in the Carriage House Shoes in Canyon.

"We feel we have the two leading names in the tennis sport in Garcia and Adidas," said Carriage House owner Kenneth Thompson in announcing the formal opening of the center Saturday.

"Tennis continues to grow in popularity each year and is an ideal athletic activity for persons of all ages," he said. "We added the tennis center only after consultation with tennis experts on what lines of equipment would best suit the needs of players in this area."

Thompson said the Carriage House is the only distributor in the Panhandle of the Garcia brand of rackets and balls.

The Carriage House tennis pro shop carries several of Garcia's multiple-line of rackets, ranging in price from $10.95 to $52.50 when strung, Thompson said. They are the Cragin Pro 240, the top of the line, the X-15, an all-metal racket, and the GT-77.

The pro shop also offers guaranteed racket-stringing facilities and features half a dozen grades of strings from nylon to top quality lamb's gut, he said.

"Clarence Granger, who has more than 20 years of experience, will do our racket stringing," Thompson said.

The Carriage House is located at 2304 4th Ave.

Man Arrested In Theft

A Canyon man remains in Randall County Jail after police found an assortment of power tools allegedly coming from a Texas-Oklahoma Express truck that was reported stolen recently.

Pedro Martinez Ruiz of 510 4th Avenue was arrested Wednesday afternoon and charged with receiving and concealing stolen property.

Canyon police officers, with the aid of two Amarillo FBI agents made the arrest after finding the tools at the Ruiz residence.

The value of the power tools has not been determined, but Canyon Police Chief Al Stewart put a minimum figure of $1,000 on the confiscated tools.

The FBI assistance came from possible interstate shipment of stolen property.

The matter is still under investigation.

A Capital Idea

By CARROLL WILSON

Recent communist victories in Cambodia and Vietman illustrate one principle of warfare we haven't heard much about since America ducked out of Southeast Asia.

That principle is that traditional warfare is far superior to guerilla warfare if the goal is winning.

True enough, guerilla warfare worked in Vietnam and Cambodia to set the stage for use of traditional massed troops, fire-and-movement warfare by softening up the opposition and making them fight a kind of war they were not willing or were ill-prepared to fight.

Now, the traditional type of fighting comes to the fore, suited as it is to rapid movement.

With traditional warfare, the goal of an army becomes acquisition of territory, of real estate, rather than the acquisition of the hearts and minds of the people.

If the principle can be held true that a war can be won or at least that a country can be taken only by traditional war practices, then it must also be true that there must be territory to take.

Now, in the era of electronic media and the banner headline, there is great psychological advantage in traditional fighting in taking major geographic locations. And, belongs to the army which can take over a country's capital city.

A war is thought to be won these days when, say, the Khmer Rouge besiege Phnom Phen and, finally, inflicting capitol punishment, storm the seat of the government.

I propose that a great deterrent to communism, therefore, which must rely on traditional warfare to win even though practicing holding actions through guerilla tactics, would be elimination of capital cities.

It's too late for Cambodia, but we might persuade Thieu to pronounce that Saigon is no longer the capital of Vietnam. The effects on the communist forces, I think, would be devastating.

Their goal, after all, is to rush into Saigon and I suspect they're being moved to an extent on the impetus of reaching that goal.

Psychology can be a powerful tool in traditional warfare. What impact would it have on the Viet Cong to learn suddenly that their wild rush down the length of South Vietnam has been to no avail, that the goal of their spree is no longer? Devastating, I suspect.

In fact, I would go so far as to say that the experience in Vietnam should be example to other Southeast Asian countries.

For one thing, the communists, who always begin their harangues with discussions of the illigitimate or corrupt "Saigon Regime" would be hard put to so identify their foes.

For another, the elimination of capital cities would have more interesting side benefits than just taking from the communists a focal point for their anger and their verbiage.

We've all heard, for example, about the corruption, the black-marketeering and the bureaucratic bumbling in Saigon.

Just from the standpoint of good governmental operation, it would be next to impossible to put together an effective bureaucracy if there was no capital city in which to throw the bureaucrats together. Can we assume that one bureacrat working alone is less dangerous and potentially less corrupt than hundreds of bureacrats working in close proximity?

If the birds-of-a-feather analogy holds true, might not black-marketeering and other corruption be reduced if the bureacuracy were dispersed?

It is a simple fact that capital cities are simply not needed to hold government together. Cambodia will have a government in exile. Thieu will probably head for Hawaii where he can set up his government. During World War II, the French found a capital city unecessary as they established their exile government elsewhere.

I think my proposal is sound. Capital cities are simply a luxury modern states can not afford to have. And, they are simply unneeded.

Examples abound in this country of capitalism.

From the grassroots up, people have been claiming for years that we simply can't afford Washington anymore. Is it just coincidence that all the principals in the Watergate Affair lived in Washington?

Presidents, particularly Nixon, have shown that a capital city is unimportant. Thus, the Western White House and the Florida White House.

Congressmen and Senators elected to represent certain districts wind up spending their time and becoming residents, in fact, of Washington. Elimination of capital cities would get them back out with the people.

Getting the bureaucrats out of Washington and back to the people would certainly spur decentralization.

I think I've come up with a capital idea.

Donations Needed

The Canyon Community Family Services Association is seeking funds to help defray medical and incidental expenses related to the heart-attack Monday of Mrs. Margaret Quintana.

Mrs. Quintana had been sole support for her family, a family which lost its home in 1973 to fire. Through the efforts of the CCFSA, the Quintanas were able to rebuild their home and remain in Canyon.

Mrs. Carmen Hernandez of the organization said Mrs. Quintana has been hospitalized in High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo.

Donations should be sent to the First National Bank of Canyon or to the Rev. Terry White, chairman of the association.

Golfers Win District Title

The Canyon High School golf team, after winning a district crown Wednesday in Amarillo action, will head for Andrews this week for the regional tournament.

Canyon golfers outscored Perryton, Dumas, Levelland and Muleshoe last week in the district tournament of 23 holes.

Bill Turner was medalist with 111 for the rounds followed by Bryan Garner with 112. Both are students at CHS.

Levelland came in second in the district tournament.

This Wednesday, the team will be in Andrews for practice rounds and the regional tournament will be Thursday and Friday.

Other team members include Phil Davis, Roger McNabb and Dewey Wilson.

been lower than in many other areas of the country. He cited an example on the West Coast where insurance coverage costs add about $4 to $5 per day to the average hospital stay.

He attributed the lower rates here to fewer claims. The rates for more urban hospitals have also risen more rapidly due to the increase in practice of such techniques as open heart surgery and neurosurgery.

Other items on the agenda for the hospital board, which meets at 7:30 p.m. at the hospital, include consideration of a proposal from Richard Bertrand for establishment of an ambulance service here.

Bertrand has proposed to take over the ambulance service from Schooler-Gordon Funeral Directors, which has said it will divest itself of the ambulance business by May 15.

Bertrand proposes that the hospital district pay an $800 per month subsidy for operation of the service. Randall County commissioners have already agreed to pay the subsidy and Canyon City commissioners will consider the proposal Monday night also.

Energy. . .

ficulties associated with operating a fusion reactor have yet to be overcome.

To implement the energy goal to use these infinitely available resources, Parker said, it must be national policy to support research in these sources. Use of coal and oil shale for a reasonible cost must also be increased. The decline in oil and gas production must be minimized by improved technology and increased drilling. Energy must be conserved, also.

Such a national energy goal would be difficult to achieve, though, Parker said.

He said American parochialism could stand in the way of a solid program, and cited as an example the reluctance of those on the Eastern seaboard to allow drilling off-shore for oil and gas. The local interests in many areas, he said, could work to inhibit the reaching of a national energy goal.

Likewise, pressure group action on government could deter the reaching of a national energy goal.

Letter To The Editor

Time Has Come For Hands Off In Vietnam

Dear Carroll:

Various proposals put forth recently to cope with the crisis in Southeast Asia provoke grave concern. All Americans will agree that the swift and safe evacuation of all Americans now in southern Viet Nam is imperative. The United States Marine Corps has had the traditional duty of protecting United States diplomatic posts and officials, and the brief use of Marines to protect the rapid and total evacuation of Americans in the Saigon area may well become imperative in the very near future. Considering the great air transport capabilities of the United States government, the entire evacuation of Americans from Viet Nam could and should be completed in a very few days. We cannot understand why the United States Department of State has not put such an evacuation into operation during the first two weeks of April.

Most alarming are the proposals put forth for the landing or projection ashore of American troops in southern Viet Nam to cover the evacuation of vast multitudes of Vietnamese citizens. In as much as the evacuation of any significant number of Vietnamese nationals only could take place through the port of Saigon, this project could well impose upon the United States Army the task of fighting intense battles to defend Siagon and Vung Tau. The loss of American life might well be considerable. In spite of the claim of a high American official that we have a moral obligation to protect Vietnamese citizens who claim to have worked for us, the United States of America has already sacrificed fifty-five thousand American lives in Indo-China and has no further obligation of a moral or any other character to the Republic of Viet Nam or its citizens. The United States cannot extend a form of extra-territorial military protection to thousands of Vietnamese. Because we do have a very strong moral obligation to prevent the killing or maiming of more young Americans of military service age in the bitter Vietnamese civil war, it would be tragic if the United States Congress were to revise the War Powers of June 30, 1973 in such a way as to permit the return of the United States Army to the soil of Viet Nam.

We should face the reality that a great many and probably most of our former Vietnamese collaborators were persuaded far more by American dollars rather than American doctrines of liberty. Western democratic philosophies are alien to Confucian traditions of Viet Nam and Vietnamese of the upper class who have adopted some of Western culture gained their Occidental culture from the French and not the Americans.

We could station vessels of the United States Navy immediately beyond the twelve-mile limit of the coast of the Saigon region to rescue Vietnamese who choose to escape in small boats. Small boats have always been plentiful in South Viet Nam.

Because the Army of the Republic of Viet Nam has abandoned to the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese military materials the value of which has been estimated as at least five hundred million dollars and perhaps, as high as two billion dollars, there is little reason to believe that shortage of materials caused the recent disasters of the Republic of Viet Nam. The frequent cowardly desertion of their posts of duty by numerous officers of the Army of the Republic of Viet Nam explains why the retreat ordered by President Nguyen Van Thieu turned into a hysterical panic and route which probably doomed the Republic Viet Nam. Is there not a considerable danger that additional material aid sent to Saigon will be surrendered to the Viet Cong and ultimately contribute to a possible menace to the security of Thailand?

In the present grim situation it is to be expected that some in America will point out the harsh reality that if many Vietnamese citizens who profess to fear for their land instead of being mainly concerned with flight into exile, it might still be possible to save some of southern Viet Nam. Possible the present unfavorable American attitude towards material military aid towards Viet Nam would change if a prolonged and heroic resistance were offered by the Army of the Republic of Viet Nam in the defense of the Saigon enclave. Such developments are possible but not probably as the demoralization of the Army and Government of the Republic of Viet Nam seems to be far advanced.

There is no reason for us to panic in this situation although some changes in familiar world political configuration are unavoidable. With events in Cambodia the eastern frontier of Thailand now is exposed to possible Communist attack from either Khmer Rouge or North Viet Nam. We must expect Thailand to cultivate Communist China and to adopt a strictly neutralist stance. So long as the United States Navy remains superior to the Soviet Fleet, our Pacific Fleet will remain a sure shield for all American islands in the Pacific Ocean. American sea power protects the Philippines from external Communist agression, but it is the responsibility of President Fernando Marcos and his government to guide Philippine society in such a way as to safeguard the Philippine republic from possible new Communist revolts.

During the past twenty-five years the Department of State, the Department of Defense, the Central Intelligence Agency, and the Agency for International Development have developed strong interests of bureaucratic pride and sentiment in Viet Nam. It is only natural for the civil officials and military officers of these departments and agencies to feel deep regret over this ultimate tragic failure of their long efforts in Viet Nam. It is totally honorable and understandable for American officials who have served in Viet Nam to feel concern over the future of former Vietnamese associates. We must not confuse these honorable but parochial bureaucratic concerns with the higher national public interests. The time has come for the United States to liberate itself from the severe burdens of our long involvement in Indo-China.

Thank you very much for printing this long letter which is in fact a guest column.

Sincerely,
John Knapp Kahler

seat failed for lack of a second.

Sherrod said while Marsh's two-year term on the board has ended he may serve until his successor is named under a state constitutional provision.

But, he said the other trustees must either reappoint Marsh or appoint Hendricks to the seat because the term of office has ended.

County Judge Pond said Thursday Sherrod's opinion on the issue corresponds to a verbal opinion rendered to him telephonically recently by an attorney in the Texas Attorney General's office.

Marsh, who along with two other school board members cast a yes vote allowing Amarillo School District to annex 176 acres of land from the Canyon School District last fall, was originally appointed to the board in 1969. He was elected to his seat in 1970 and 1971, but has not faced the electorate since that time. Nor was he reappointed to his seat in 1973, according to records in the county judge's office and the county clerk's office.

Marsh did not file to be re-elected to the board this year and his name was not included on a preliminary ballot prepared for the election held April 5. Hendricks, however, did file for election to the office.

Marsh later said the fact that he did not file for election did not mean he was interested in being removed from the board.

A state Attorney General's ruling rendered in late March indicated that because of the nature of precinct 4, no one could be elected to the board from that precinct.

The ruling said that electors residing in a county line school district may not vote for the county school trustee for the county board. All residents of precinct four live in the Amarillo School District and cannot vote in the county trustee election for Randall County, the opinion said.

There was no indication last week as to how the trustees will decide which candidate will serve on the board. During the April 10 meeting, discussion centered on the possibility of drawing names from a hat.

Sherrod said it appears Marsh could have a vote on who would be named to his seat, since he will still be serving on the board possibly until after the vote is taken.

day night.

Austin, who said his business will be a family-owned venture if a franchise is granted, has also filed a proposed franchise agreement which will be reviewed by commissioners during their meeting. The city has a model cable television franchise which was worked up several years ago when there was some interest in cable television for the city.

City Manager Glen Metcalf said the commission will probably wait before taking action on granting a franchise until both proposals have been reviewed and discussed.

Austin has proposed to have a cable television firm in operation in the city within a year after the franchise is granted. Miller said his group would also try to have a firm in operation within a year.

Austin's proposal is to offer two independent stations from Dallas, an educational station from Dallas, three Amarillo stations and education and message channels on his cable offerings. He proposes a $17.50 connection charge and a monthly rate of $6.95. He also offers a franchise payment of 3 per cent of gross profits payable annually.

Austin is currently managing two cable television firms in Kansas.

Other business scheduled for city commission discussion Monday night includes a proposal from Richard Bertrand, now an ambulance operator for Schooler-Gordon Funeral Directors. Bertrand has proposed to purchase the ambulance service from the funeral home for operation here.

His proposal is that Randall County, the City of Canyon, and the South Randall County Hospital District each pay $800 per month subsidy for operation of the service. Currently, the city is paying about $830 per month while the county is paying about $300, and the hospital district is paying nothing.

Randall County commissioners last Monday approved Bertrand's proposal and agreed to pay the $800 monthly fee.

Schooler-Gordon has given notice it will not offer ambulance service for the city and county as of May 15.

A rural fire protection plan for Randall County will also be reviewed by commissioners, who at their last meeting indicated they approve of the proposal in principle. The plan calls for the Canyon Fire Department to provide fire service for all of the county with back-up from Amarillo, Bushland, Umbarger, Happy and Tanglewood.

The commissioners meet at 7 p.m. in the community center.

babies just to have one child.

Another reason population continues to increase in many subsistence-level countries is that parents feel large families assure them a kind of "social security" in their old age.

Religion or religious beliefs concerning birth control also have some effect, he said.

Owens cited Taiwan as an example of a country which undertook its own economic development and has raised its own standard of living. In the process, he said, the population increase rate has declined.

This is because an economically developing country, with a government which provides access to the political and economic systems for the people and which insures integrity in those systems, also provides the proper incentives to guide the people away from large families.

Owens admitted waiting for countries to change their political will in support of their own populations may be a long-term project.

After reviewing the various arguments for and against continued U.S. aid programs to starving countries, Owens said he would feel a certain moral obligation to help those people who are starving.

That country which is now the worst off in terms of starvation is Bangladesh, Owens said.

A country about the size of Arkansas, it has a population of 85 million and is expected to have a population in the year 2000 of 160 million. It is a country without natural resources and with a productivity rate which is extremely low.

Other starving countries include those in Southeast Asia and east of India.

The effects of hunger in the Third World on the United States directly will be minimal, Owens said.

"Hunger does not produce revolutions," he said, "and we might wish it did because there'd be changes in government or reforms by and for hungry people."

One problem which the U.S. may have to deal with will be an employment problem because of a labor force explosion resulting from over-population. Unemployment is a political problem and can lead to revolution.

Secretaries Week Observance Involves Tierra Blanca Chapter

"Minding Everybody's Business Everywhere" is the theme for the 24th annual observance of National Secretaries Week which is sponsored by the National Secretaries Association (International).

Mrs. Virginia Byars, president of the Tierra Blanca NSA chapter, and her fellow secretaries in the chapter will be observing the national week here beginning today with group attendance at the First Presbyterian Church of Canyon.

The Tierra Blanca NSA chapter includes about 25 secretaries representing businesses in Canyon, Hereford and area. From this group of local members, the Tierra Blanca chapter will recognize five members as the "secretary of the day" during the week's observance.

On Wednesday, April 23, the national organization of secretaries will observe all members with "Secretaries Day" and locally the chapter will have a luncheon for members, and guests. Special guests for the luncheon will be the membership of the Future Secretaries Association at West Texas State University along with other secretaries interested in the organization.

Highlight of Secretaries Week will be the annual "bosses night banquet" at which time the local chapter will recognize a Secretary of the Year and Boss of the Year. The banquet for 1975 will be held at the Country Club in Hereford beginning at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 24.

On Saturday, April 26, the local chapter membership will be attending a Secretaries Seminar being sponsored by the Business Education Department of West Texas State University. The seminar is to be held at the Activities Center, Room 202, on campus with Melba Ernst, former International Secretary of the Year, NSA, as featured speaker.

During Secretaries Week, NSA will stress its commitment to increasing awareness of the Certified Professional Secretary (CPS) rating and to encouraging upcoming generations of secretaries through Future Secretaries Association (FSA) program.

"Secretaries are minding everybody's business everywhere in the sense that they function in pivotal roles assisting executives in business, industry, government and the professions. In the office workforce, experienced secretaries continue to enjoy a high rating for marketable skills and on the front line of management support staffs, the secretaries are the detail planners and doers for carrying out policy," reports the NSA organization president, M. Ursulle Gallerani. .

In charge of Secretaries Week planning for the Tierra Blanca chapter here are Wilma Johnson, chairman, Eleanor Baker, Jo Ann Land, and Ethel Lewis.

We've about recovered from the Fall Market at the Apparel Mart in Dallas last week. It gave us our first look at fall fashion for 1975. The looks are varied and for the most part more casual than we've seen before.

For the ladies, sportswear and coordinates still rate high and designer collections are especially exciting. Earthtones are very much in the Fall scene again and almost every line capitalizes on nostalgic looks.

Gentlemen will discover the leisure suit for fall which is as at home in the office as it is on the patio will be stressed in the fall lines.

New arrivals at the Towne Shop this week are collections of bright patterned sport shirts by Wrangler for men and young men. They are great go alongs with our Wrangler Slacks. The shirts at $10.00 and the slacks at $11.00 are great gift ideas for Graduates and Father's Day.

We're also showing for the first time Marbella Knits in coordinates for ladies. Blushing Pink and Ivory go togethers by Marbella will delight the lady looking for that cool European fashion look. Yet the prices on these items are just right for West Texas pocketbooks.
